

MSc in Evolution & Human Behaviour

University of Kent

- A unique, interdisciplinary, combination of Evolutionary Anthropology and Psychology.
- Taught by expert, active researchers in evolutionary approaches to understanding behaviour.
- Select from a range of advanced topics such as Evolutionary Anthropology, Primatology, Human Behaviour, Cognitive Psychology & Cognitive Neuroscience.
- Perfect foundation for PhD research: theoretical background, discipline specific knowledge and advanced research methods.
- For students with an undergraduate degree in anthropology, psychology, biology or a related discipline.

- For more information:
http://www.kent.ac.uk/sac/studying/programmes/pgt/MSc/msc_evolution.html
- To apply online, visit:
http://records.kent.ac.uk/external/admissions/pg_application.php